

The 2006

Brighton Schools Alumni Hall of Fame

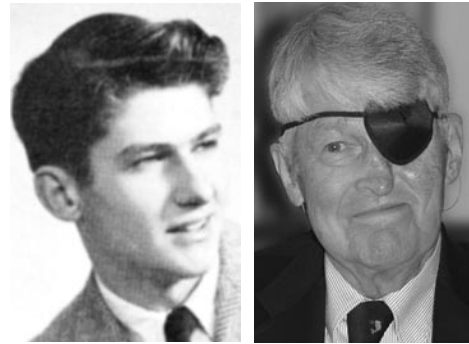

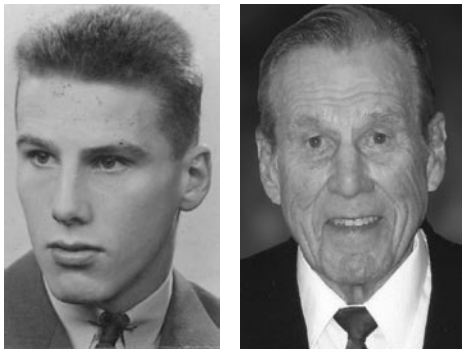

A project of the Brighton Schools Alumni Association

Inspiring figures in business, the military, education, religion and the humanities are the first to be inducted into the Brighton Schools Alumni Hall of Fame, a project of the Brighton Schools Alumni Association (BSAA). Alumni were nominated from almost every decade since the first BHS graduating class, in 1932; from all over the country; and from a wide range of professions – sports, music, medicine, humanitarian service, business and more – a fascinating glimpse into where a Brighton education can take someone.

• William F. Scandling ('40), who died in 2005, was an entrepreneur and philanthropist who co-founded what became the Saga Food Service Corporation as a senior at Hobart and William Smith Colleges, in 1948, with two other students after the school closed down the student cafeteria. The business became a model for the restaurant industry for its staff-empowered management style, excellence in training, and philosophy of how to treat employees. The company ended up serving more than 300 campuses and 250 hospitals, as well as running several restaurants. Scandling was one of the college's biggest donors and a substantial supporter of the University of Rochester.

• Jacksel M. Broughton ('42) retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1968 with 216 fighter-combat missions and 43 awards for heroism and military service, including four Distinguished Flying Crosses, two Silver Stars and the highest Air Force decoration – the Air Force Cross for individual heroism in combat, awarded by the President. He was combat-ready in every Air Force fighter from the P-47 in 1947 to the F-106 in 1968. After the military, he flew for Antilles Airboats; supervised an air-cargo operation in Alaska for Mobil Oil; formed a company to design, fabricate and test air-cushion vehicles; worked on the Rockwell B1 flight test team; and was manager of checkout operations on the space shuttle Endeavor. He is the author of two books about the conflict in Southeast Asia and continues to speak, provide TV and radio commentary, write and consult.

• David T. Kearns ('48) led Xerox into international prominence and has been an innovative role model in both business and education. As CEO of Xerox Corp. from 1982-'90, he was the first U.S. business leader to turn back the tide of Japanese competition in a targeted industry. He served as U.S. Deputy Secretary of Education from 1991-'93, has written several books about the crisis in U.S. education, and continues to be a strong advocate for education at all levels. At least three major universities have dedicated programs in his name: Harvard University, the University of Rochester and RIT/NTID.

• Frederick R. Trost ('53) has been an inspiring pastor and United Church of Christ (UCC) leader at local, national and international levels. He served as an assistant pastor in Germany before settling in Chicago, IL, progressing from assistant to associate to senior pastor at St. Paul's and leading his congregation in humanitarian efforts such as serving low-income children and refugees from overseas, and providing a "home" to congregations from other religions and countries. He was president of the UCC's Wisconsin Conference; founded the Biblical/Theological/Liturgical Fellowship of the UCC; and co-founded the Mercersburg Society, Craigville Theological Colloquies and more.

• Pauline Yu ('66), president of the American Council of Learned Societies and a leading figure in academia, specializes in the study of classical Chinese poetry and is the author of several books, articles, reviews and conference papers in that area. She was founding chair of the East Asian Languages and Literatures program at the University of California-Irvine; has taught at Columbia University, the University of Minnesota, and Stanford University; and has received dozens of awards and fellowships. She is a trustee of the National Humanities Center and a member of the board of overseers of Harvard University, and board of trustees of both the Teagle Foundation and the Asian Cultural Council in New York.

